GCMS Re-designated as National Essential Elements School to Watch

Congratulations to Garden City Middle School on being designated, for the second time, as a National Schools to Watch. Staff members traveled to Washington, D.C to attend the Schools to Watch Conference and Award Ceremony in late June. Pictured above accepting the award on behalf of the middle school are guidance counselor Robyn Weiner (center), science teacher Christine Wilk (third from right), and reading teacher Kim Greenwald (second from right) with National Schools to Watch representatives in Washington, D.C.
